Loïc Voide appointed Chief Country Officer Switzerland and CEO of Deutsche Bank (Suisse) SA

Zurich – Deutsche Bank has appointed Loïc Voide as the new Chief Country Officer (CCO) of Deutsche Bank in Switzerland and Chief Executive Officer of Deutsche Bank (Suisse) SA, effective October 1, 2023. He succeeds Marco Pagliara in both roles after Pagliara was appointed Head of Emerging Markets at Deutsche Bank Private Bank in June 2023.

Voide joined Deutsche Bank in 2015 in Zurich to lead the coverage of Wealth Management Turkey and was subsequently named Head of Wealth Management Russia and Eastern Europe. In November 2018, he was appointed Head of International Private Bank (IPB) in Middle East and Africa (MEA) as well as Deutsche Bank Geneva branch manager and joined the Executive Board of Deutsche Bank (Suisse) SA. In 2020, in addition to his role of Head of IPB MEA, Voide took over the position of Co-CEO for Deutsche Bank in the Middle East and Africa region based in Dubai.

Before joining Deutsche Bank, Voide held several senior management positions at UBS and Credit Suisse covering the Middle East. A Swiss national, Voide has over 30 years of experience since beginning his career as a bank apprentice with the Swiss Bank Corporation (now UBS) in 1990.

Deutsche Bank in Switzerland

Deutsche Bank has had a local Swiss footprint for more than 40 years and, with around 600 employees in Zurich and Geneva, has strong roots as one of the most important foreign banks. As a globally connected and represented universal bank, it offers all services locally via the four areas of private bank, corporate bank, investment bank and DWS, the asset management division of the bank. Switzerland is the center for the wealth management business in the Central Europe region. In addition, parts of the Asia-Pacific business (APAC), Middle East & Africa (MEA) and Latin America (LatAm) are managed from Switzerland.
